Bluesfest stage collapses during severe storm

Power goes out and streetlights go black as sudden squall hits Ottawa

A major storm laid waste to the MBNA Stage at Bluesfest last night, moments after classic rock band Cheap Trick had its set cut short and left the stage.

The structure came down quickly in a gust of strong wind.

Bluesfest organizers cancelled the remaining acts — including headliner Death Cab for Cutie — and ordered the festival grounds evacuated.

Five people were injured at Bluesfest during the storm, paramedics said.

A 40-year-old man was rushed to hospital in critical condition with an abdominal wound, a broken leg and a broken hip, said paramedic Supt. Mike Latimer.

Two other people were in serious but stable condition and two more suffered minor injuries, he said.

Emergency vehicles made their way through the crowds of festival-goers pouring out of LeBreton Flats as the rain came down and lightning flashed in the sky.

"Due to extreme weather conditions, we have regrettably had to shut down all stages for the night."
OFFICIAL STATEMENT FROM BLUESFEST

Environment Canada issued an alert for the city, warning of the "potential development of severe thunderstorms with large hail, damaging winds or heavy rainfall."

The Ottawa Police Service received about 300 calls in two hours when the storm stranded boaters, downed hydro lines, trees and signs, and lightning sparked a townhouse fire, a spokesperson said.

Before news broke of the injuries at Bluesfest, concert organizers released a statement saying that no one was seriously injured.

Bluesfest inspires proposals

During the sweet sounds of Blue Rodeo at Bluesfest on Friday night, a marriage proposal flashed across the big screen next to the stage. "Gentlemonkey, will you marry me?" tweeted b0uch3.

It was one of many tweets — including a handful of marriage proposals — that Bluesfest organizers posted to video screens. Romantics might be disappointed to learn that b0uch3, whose real name is Mike Bouchard, says the proposal was tweeted "in jest." Musicians — including Blue Rodeo's Jim Cuddy and Metric's Emily Haines — were also proposed to by Bluesfest fans over Twitter. JESSICA SMITH

Transit plan calls for Ottawa to borrow billions

City could spend $13.3 billion over 38 years to expand the system, according to Ottawa's long-range financial plan for transit

JESSICA SMITH
@METRONEWS.CA

City council has a long-range financial plan that, if followed, will see the city borrow more than $5 billion over the next four decades to expand public transportation.

Before they approved the $2.1-billion light rail project last week, city councillors asked staff if Ottawa could afford it — without raising transit fares or transit taxes by more than the rate of inflation.

"We've concluded that the current plan for transit meets the test of affordability," said city treasurer Marian Simuluk at last week's light rail meeting.

The financial plan shows the city spending $18.6 billion by 2048 on capital investments in transit — including expanding light rail and bus rapid transit and replacing aging vehicles. To pay for it, the city would access more than $22.9 billion of capital funding — $5.7 billion from the provincial and federal governments, $2.6 billion in gas taxes, $4.2 billion from the city's development charges, and $10.2 billion in transit taxes and fares — but it would still have to borrow money, said Simuluk.

"Unfortunately, the timing of the receipt of those revenues does not match the timing of those expenditures. The expenditures are more front-ended," she said.

"We are looking at issuing, in the first 21 years, approximately $3.8 billion in debt."
CITY TREASURER MARIAN SIMULUK

The long-range financial plan would see the city borrow more than $5.2 billion by 2048. However, the cost of servicing that debt would stay well below the limit set by the provincial government for municipalities and the limit on transit debt the city has set for itself, said Simuluk.

Volleyball tournament awaits Guinness confirmation of record

Organizers of HOPE Volleyball Summerfest are waiting for the Guinness Book of World Records to confirm what they already know — that Saturday's fundraiser was the biggest one-day volleyball tournament in the world.

Executive director Holly Tarrison said she's been playing phone tag with the record keepers in England, hoping they'll confirm soon that the 10,000 people who came to Mooney's Bay to play volleyball, raising $100,000 for six charities, will be enough to officially set a world record. JESSICA SMITH

Questions raised over flag contract

Under international trade agreements, Canadian flags are not required to be made in country
Companies with cheaper bids denied contract

It should be a good-news story: An Ontario manufacturer beats out a dozen factories in China in a competition to produce 400,000 Canadian flags for the federal government.

But the $294,000 contract awarded to Toronto-based Scythes Inc. earlier this year has raised questions about whether the tendering process was fair.

Scythes Inc., parent of Flying Colours International, was one of 18 firms that bid to produce small nylon flags for distribution to new Canadians at citizenship ceremonies.

The company won the contract not because its prices were lower — internal documents obtained under the Access to Information Act show their bid was the second-highest, behind another Ontario firm, at about 65 cents a flag.

Scythes got the contract because the 17 other bidders submitted samples that a Public Works official said were technically non-compliant. Colours were off or staples were missing.

"Something doesn't smell very good here," says Michael Blanchard, whose Ottawa-based Adware Promotions Inc. made a rival bid that was $220,000 cheaper.

His were to be made in China.

The purchase is also unusual because Citizenship and Immigration had budgeted only $140,000, requiring delivery by March 10, three weeks before the fiscal year-end.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

Flag wars

- This is Michael Blanchard's second bad experience with a flag order that Public Works has tendered on behalf of Citizenship and Immigration.
- In 2007, 12 bidders responded to a tender to supply 150,000 nylon flags.
- 11 of the bids were declared technically non-compliant, again by a Public Works official.
- Those bids were also rejected because of problems reported with samples.
- Scythes Inc. won that contest as well, with a $121,000 contract that was about $80,000 higher than Blanchard's bid.

Ousted Mubarak not in coma, doctor says

Hosni Mubarak's lead doctor denied yesterday that the ousted Egyptian president had suffered a stroke or was in a coma, as Mubarak's lawyer claimed.

Dr. Assem Azzam said the 83-year-old Mubarak only had a bout of low blood pressure and was in stable condition.

Mubarak's lawyer said earlier that he had a stroke and was in a coma.

Mubarak has been in a hospital since April under arrest on charges he ordered the killings of protesters during Egypt's uprising.

He's said to be suffering from heart trouble.

The former president is set to face trial in about two weeks on charges he ordered the killings of protesters during the 18-day uprising that ousted him on Feb. 11.

If convicted, Mubarak could face the death penalty.

Nexus members caught smuggling: Docs

Travellers under Canada's Nexus program who are considered low risk have been caught trying to illegally smuggle goods into the country.

The Nexus program allows Canadian residents to pass through special lines when travelling to the U.S.

It's designed to make border patrol more efficient by allowing guards to move those who aren't considered to be a danger to border security through customs more quickly and focus on those who are potentially high risk.

But documents show more than a hundred Nexus travellers crossing the border in the second half of 2010 said they had no goods, or undervalued the goods they were declaring, only to be found to be smuggling the items.

The goods range from a couple of bottles of beer to a $16,000 engagement ring. Other examples include an Ontario resident who attempted to declare a boat as Canadian goods when a customs officer found out it was actually being imported, and a Quebec traveller who bought tires online from a business in the United States and had them installed on his car but never declared them.

When animals approach

- They're in the garbage, in the backyard and in the headlines
- As summer heats up, Metro separates fact from fiction and guides you through the urban jungle

"There's a temptation to feed them because they're almost tame ... but if you do that you're habituating that animal — it just scored."
KEVIN STRANGE, CALGARY ZOO

JENNIFER TAPLIN
@METRONEWS.CA

Whether it's a deer smashing through a coffee shop window in Halifax or a black bear taking a snooze in a Kanata backyard, wildlife loves cities almost as much as commuters.

And this summer has seen myriad of tales of animal-human conflicts in Canadian cities, with the case of a Toronto man allegedly hitting a baby raccoon with a shovel drawing out both animal lovers and raccoon haters in protest.

But, despite the attention, are citizens really having more run-ins with critters?

"It's massively manmade this idea we're having more interactions … but there's no doubt we're encroaching on their territory," said Simon Gadbois, an animal behaviour researcher in Halifax.

Habitat encroachment and climate change play a role, but conflicts come in cycles depending on animal populations and their environment, he said.

These days, he said, people are more likely to report animal sightings after learning of a horrific event, such as recent bear attacks in B.C. and the 19-year-old Toronto woman who was killed by coyotes in Cape Breton, N.S., in 2009.

In the short term, growing cities mean a loss of habitat as animals creep into cities looking for food and shelter, but in the long term it means there will be fewer animals, said Kevin Strange, with the conservation outreach program at the Calgary Zoo.

"Cities and towns are almost always built on a water body, and in the west here they're always on a river and rivers are green highways (for animals)," he said.

"There are times when climate change can really make animals migrate."

Climate change can be good for some animals and bad for others. If there is a shortage of rabbits, for example, coyotes will range further into cities and find that cats make a good substitute, he said.

"Cats think (coyotes) are dogs and it's not until the last second they realize they're not dealing with the average dog," Gadbois said. "And some cat owners put those little bird bells around the necks of cats, which becomes like a lunch bell for the coyotes."

Experts believe the keys to making cities less attractive to wildlife is to take a serious look at waste management and get people to stop feeding creatures like deer and raccoons.

Gadbois said people need to realize wildlife is always going to hang around cities — it might not be ideal, but not as dangerous as people think.

"Hey, get over it," he said. "That's what it is to live in Canada."

No party animals here

When you have an uninvited, furry pest living in your house, throw a party.

Reesa Atnikov, a supervisor with the not-for-profit Wildlife Haven Rehabilitation Centre in Manitoba, said they take thousands of calls every year about wild animals like raccoons or skunks that have become a little too comfortable in an urban setting.

"We recommend bright lights, loud music and rags soaked in bleach. They don't like the smell, they don't like the lights and they don't like the loud music," she said.

But if you're in the backyard and Winnie and Yogi wander in to sniff out your garbage bin, the best plan is to call a conservation officer, said Kevin Strange with the Calgary Zoo.

"That's got to be a fairly threatening situation … and it may have a desire to protect the food source," he said.

Canada's most unwanted

We asked officials in Metro cities across the country to tell us about their most troublesome critters:

Halifax — Coyote
Most dangerous: Coyotes can wander into the city's peninsula and get trapped. A power-meter reader was bitten by a coyote earlier this year.
Biggest pest: None.
Newest problem: Bears may have poked around the suburbs in the past few weeks.

Ottawa — Black bear
Most dangerous: Black bear.
Biggest pest: Raccoon. Several YouTube videos attest to raccoons' ability to defeat supposedly impregnable green bins.
Newest problem: Bedbug. Pest control companies note a dramatic increase in complaints in 2010.

Toronto — Raccoon
Most dangerous: None, but leaving food out is discouraged because coyotes can begin to associate people with a food source and may start hanging around.
Biggest pest: Torontonians have the most trouble with raccoons.
Newest problem: None.

London — Ashborer
Most dangerous: None.
Biggest pest: The buckthorn plant is infiltrating London's natural areas and pushing out all the native species.
Newest problem: The emerald ash borer beetle is wreaking havoc on ash trees, of which there are more than 100,000 in the area.

Winnipeg — Cougar
Most dangerous: Deer. Manitoba Public Insurance reports collisions with deer make up the most animal-auto accidents.
Biggest pest: Mosquito.
Newest problem: Several witnesses spotted a cougar in Winnipeg suburb Transcona recently.

Calgary — Coyote
Most dangerous: Black bears occasionally come up the river valley into the city.
Biggest pest: Officials say there are resident coyotes living in the city.
Newest problem: "We don't get new pests in Calgary because Alberta doesn't let them in," says Bill Bruce of Calgary Animal Services.

Edmonton — Mice
Most dangerous: Mice, and all the germs and destruction they bring.
Biggest pest: Mice, bedbugs and ants are the main ones right now.
Newest problem: "They're all the same ones. They just get worse," says Gladys Schultz of Edmonton Exterminators.

Vancouver — Raccoon
Most dangerous: Coyotes can eat pets and have had contact with people; bites have been reported.
Biggest pest: Raccoons have bitten lots of people, mostly because of people trying to hand feed them.
Newest problem: None.

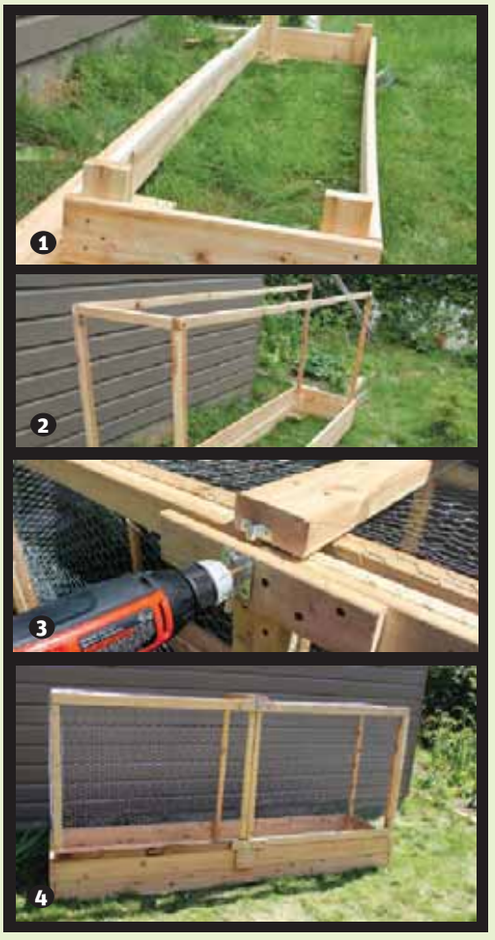
How to build a garden box

PHOTOS
SEAN MCKIBBON/METRO



Raccoons are tough to keep out of a garden once they decide to raid it. You might want to try building a raccoon-resistant garden box.

Make sure to wear safety gear and check your local building codes. And remember, this design is not the work of an expert, just a reporter who was making it up as he went along. The project is fairly basic and you can alter the dimensions to suit your needs.

1 Construct a garden box using wide 2x6 (or wider if you want) cedar planks. A 2x4 or a 4x4 cedar post in each corner secures the planks. Posts are expensive so I used 2x4s.

2 Cut the 2x4s to 8 inches, leaving 4 inches to secure the 2x2s that form the upright parts of the cage frame to put on top of the box.

3 Connect the upright 2x2s with more 2x2s along the top, cover three sides and the roof with mesh, and then construct wooden frame doors with mesh fronts, with a latch at the top and the bottom.

4 It took me eight hours working by myself and it cost almost $217 in materials. The simplest way I can explain the doors is comparing it to stapling a cage to a picture frame and then screwing another frame on top of the first. SEAN MCKIBBON

Ex-Murdoch CEO Rebekah Brooks arrested in London after showing up for police questioning London's top cop submits his resignation

Airline reacts

The arrest sealed Rebekah Brooks's swift transformation from one of Britain's most powerful female executives to a figure of scorn and even parody.

- Yesterday, an Irish discount airline seized on perceptions of Brooks as an outlaw, placing an ad in The Observer newspaper that showed a photograph of the longtime Murdoch confidant, said to be so close to him that she was seen as family.
- "Hacked Off with High Fares ... I'm outta here with Ryanair!" the caption crowed.

A burgeoning voicemail hacking and police bribery scandal cut closer than ever to Rupert Murdoch and Scotland Yard yesterday with the arrest of the media magnate's former British newspaper chief and the resignation of London's police commissioner.

Though the former executive, Rebekah Brooks, and the police chief, Paul Stephenson, have denied wrongdoing, both developments are ominous not only for Murdoch's News Corp., but for a British power structure that nurtured a cosy relationship with his papers for years.

Brooks, the ultimate social and political insider, dined at Christmas with Prime Minister David Cameron. His Conservative-led government is now facing increasing questions about its relationship with Murdoch's media empire.

Another of Murdoch's chief executives, Wall Street Journal publisher Les Hinton, also had to resign Friday after more than 50 years with Murdoch. James Murdoch, head of European and Asian operations for his father's company, News Corp., is under increasing scrutiny. He and the senior Murdoch, along with Brooks, face questioning tomorrow by British lawmakers investigating the scandal.

News International placed advertisements in most Sunday national newspapers outlining their intention after their apology advertisements in Saturday national newspapers. News of the World is accused of hacking into the mobile phones of crime victims, celebrities and politicians.

Economists look for signs from Bank of Canada

The Bank of Canada faces a conundrum.

With the Canadian economy on track, it is not a question of whether the central bank should raise rates, but rather when the increase will come.

But faced with a growing credit crisis in Europe and fiscal gridlock in the United States, Bank of Canada governor Mark Carney has repeatedly raised concerns about the potential fallout on the Canadian economy.

"The proverbial rock is an economy that is expected to grow just fast enough to absorb the limited amounted of slack that's still tamping inflation," BMO economist Sal Guatieri wrote in a report.

"The hard place that Carney is caught between is the growing risk that Canada's economy will underperform if U.S. demand remains weak and/or Europe's credit crisis erupts and spews lava across global financial markets."

The central bank is widely expected to keep its overnight rate target at one per cent when it makes its rate announcement tomorrow, followed by its Monetary Policy Report on Wednesday.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Increasing rates now with the U.S. not having a clear decision on the debt ceiling is inviting more instability and risk into Canada."

GLEN HODGSON, CHIEF ECONOMIST AT THE CONFERENCE BOARD OF CANADA

Stocks in for tough week

Gains will likely be elusive on stock markets this week, despite a strong start to the second-quarter earnings reporting season, as worries about massive government debt shift to the United States.

Investors already worried about the European debt crisis were further frustrated last week as Republicans and Democrats appeared no closer to coming to an agreement to raise the $14.3-trillion US debt ceiling.

The vote was unanimous, and people seemed to like the conceptual drawings. Last week's council meeting on the $2.1-billion LeBreton-Blair light rail line was a mostly mild, uncontroversial affair.

Apart from interventions by former regional chair Andy Haydon, who thinks we should stick with buses, and another guy who thought a solar-powered monorail would be neat instead, there were few discouraging words about LRT and few unaffiliated members of the public to make them.

Representatives of city advisory committees, the University of Ottawa, the Rideau Centre, the National Arts Centre and others generally voiced support. Leftover seating from which to hear this support was readily available.

The relative quiet from the general public could just be reluctance to spend a perfect summer day in the chilly gloom of the council chamber, or it might indicate that we're generally happy with the plan as it stands. (Mayor Jim Watson put a similar silence-equals-approval spin on light turnout for his pre-budget town halls earlier this year).

The relative quiet from the general public could just be reluctance to spend a perfect summer day in the chilly gloom of the council chamber, or it might indicate that we're generally happy with the plan as it stands.

Maybe, though, with the first actual train trip not scheduled until 2018, the whole procurement and construction rigamarole still ahead of us, and the derailment of the last LRT project still fresh in our memory, we've learned not to thrill excessively to such preliminaries.

There was more excitement earlier in the week as councillors squabbled over whose wards would be hooked up first in subsequent phases of the LRT plan, years further up the track.

Our new and improved $2.1-billion transit megaproject seemed to generate less buzz than the $1.3-million segregated bike lane on Laurier, now a week old and experiencing some growing pains.

Not only has the lane's opening pitted cyclists against some businesses, street residents and Para Transpo users adjusting to the new setup, but cyclists against cyclists.

Avery Burdett of the Coalition for Responsible Cycling opposed the installation of the lane in the first place — he'd like to see better-trained cyclists over this "engineering solution" — and hasn't seen much to change his mind. He worries especially about vehicles turning right across the lane at intersections: "That's where someone's going to pay the price."

About 11,000 cyclists, though, tried it out last week, and the barriers and reduced lanes of motor traffic also seem to have made Laurier more inviting to pedestrians. Hiccups aside, until that LRT tunnel's dug, it's probably the one of the more hassle-free ways available across the downtown core.

Vet performs mouth-to-beak CPR on eagle

A Bend, Ore., veterinarian has performed life-saving CPR on an injured bald eagle that was under anesthesia during physical therapy.

KTVZ-TV reports Jeff Cooney performed the therapy, during which the bald eagle nicknamed Patriot stopped breathing.

Cooney's "mouth-to-beak" resuscitation got the eagle breathing again.

"He has gained 10 per cent of his body weight and is eating fish like crazy," Cooney said. "His attitude is greatly improved, and he's starting to act like a normal, rambunctious bald eagle."

The injured eagle was found by two La Pine women near Crane Prairie Reservoir in June.

The eagle had suffered, among other injuries, a dislocated shoulder and paralyzed right leg.

Cooney says it's uncertain whether he will be able to return the bird to the wild.

If the bird's foot doesn't improve in the next three weeks, Cooney says he could be forced to euthanize him.

Weird Al still mocking stars and making music

Yankovic talks about his new CD, his Lady Gaga cover and the struggling music industry ◐ 'People just aren't buying albums the way they used to,' says the comedian

Since 1983, Weird Al Yankovic has released 13 albums, with six of them going platinum and four reaching gold status.

It's a pretty good batting average for any artist, and an especially great one for a comedian-musician.

Yankovic says he used to think all of his albums would sell well, until now.

"Back in the '90s I was getting kind of cocky. I was just assuming that every album that I put out would go gold at least and now it's a huge goal for anybody to reach that level," he said.

"People just aren't buying albums the way they used to."

His latest release, Alpocalypse, debuted at No. 9 on the Billboard 200 albums chart last month, selling about 44,000 copies in its first week, according to Nielsen SoundScan.

"It's still a huge thrill for me to make the Top 10 because that's all relative ... but sales-wise, it's not what it used to be," Yankovic said.

The album's lead single is a parody of Lady Gaga's No. 1 hit Born This Way.

Yankovic says getting his version — called Perform This Way — out to the public wasn't an easy process.

First, Lady Gaga's management wouldn't allow it, but once the pop star heard Yankovic's cover, she approved his sample.

"It was a little depressing actually," Yankovic said about waiting to hear back from Lady Gaga.

"(I thought) I was never going to be able to release my Lady Gaga parody officially and that my album was postponed indefinitely."

The boy wizard has vanquished the dark knight with a record-setting magic act at the weekend box office. Warner Bros. estimates that Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows: Part 2 took in $168.6 million domestically from Friday to Sunday. That beats the previous best opening weekend of $158.4 million, also held by Warner Bros. for 2008's Batman blockbuster The Dark Knight. The studio had not yet released international numbers for the full weekend, but Deathly Hallows: Part 2 has been working the same charms since it began rolling out overseas Wednesday. The current franchise high is $974.8 million worldwide for the first film, Harry Potter and the Sorcerer's Stone 10 years ago.

Carell's last chance for Office Emmy

His Office character Michael Scott may be utterly clueless, but Steve Carell knows a thing or two. And when it comes to his sixth shot at the best actor Emmy, Carell jokes that he's got this one in the bag.

"Of course, what could possibly go wrong? How could I lose? I don't even know if that's even a remote possibility," the 48-year-old said with a laugh.

Carell's latest nomination was for his final season on the hit NBC comedy — his last chance to take home the trophy for his role as the inept Dunder Mifflin branch manager.

Carell says he'll be attending this year's awards on Sept. 18 with low expectations and no regrets.

"I'm very proud of having been on that show and all the friendships that I got out of it," he said.

"An Emmy would be great, but it wouldn't make my experience on The Office any better because it was already so good."

Carell, who stars alongside Ryan Gosling, Julianne Moore and Emma Stone in the upcoming romantic comedy Crazy, Stupid, Love, says he's still not comfortable with being famous. The movie opens July 29.

"It's something that I never expected or never dreamt of happening. I just don't want my kids to have a warped perception of me or my relationship with them," he said.

"I remember driving around with my daughter and I think posters for some movie had gone up and she was just a little girl ... and she was like, 'Why are there pictures of you everywhere?' And I think it was as weird for me as it was for her."

DOING DINNER. With the divorce papers filed, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Maria Shriver attended a dinner party at a Brentwood restaurant for a friend of their son Patrick, though the estranged couple arrived separately, according to X-17. A source says the couple "kept their distance" during the get-together. "It wasn't like Arnold and Maria were making googly eyes at each other or anything," the source says. "They were there for the benefit of their son but there was no reconciliation going on. They exchanged a few words cordially, though." METRO

DAMAGES. Paris Hilton's little brother, Barron Hilton, is still being haunted by his day of reckless driving in 2008, during which the then 19-year-old was arrested for driving while intoxicated and allegedly struck Fernando Tellez, a gas station attendant, with his car.

Now a jury has ruled Barron must pay Tellez $4.9 million in damages, according to TMZ. "We disagree with the jury," a source close to the defendant says. "Barron did not strike the attendant. 12 days of summer fun

"I'm bored!" It's the two words every parent dreads during the summer Fear not: Jason White of the Frugal Dad website offers 12 days worth of affordable summer fun activities

JASON WHITE
FRUGALDAD.COM
METRO WORLD NEWS

THINKSTOCK.COM

On Day 11, we go to war.

1. Sprinkler day
Have everyone put on their bathing suits and water have fun. But not for too long! This is a good time to teach them about conserving water, reducing utility costs, etc.

2. Attend "story time" at your local library
My kids love to check out books on all kinds of subjects. My son currently has three library books on swimming, pirates and going to the dentist (quite a diverse reader, huh?). Many libraries also have a story time to encourage a summer reading program.

3. Rent a summer-themed movie on a rainy day
Our pick: Freaky Friday.

4. Set up a lemonade stand
This is probably my favourite idea because it involves lessons in entrepreneurship. Lend your kids $10 as "seed money" for supplies, or better yet, let them use their own money from savings. This way, they don't get used to the idea that borrowing leads to prosperity. Take the kids along to the grocery store one morning and let them pick up the lemons, sugar, cups and a couple bags of ice to keep in a cooler by their stand.

5. Teach your kids to fly a kite
Check your 10-day forecast and look for a windy day in the coming week. Pick up an expensive kite for the kids — it's worth the investment. I even recommend springing for the extra spool of kite string on a roller because the string and handles that come with the kites are lousy.

6. Make homemade play-doh, using a recipe found online
I suppose the next best option would be to pick up some commercial Play-Doh on sale, but what fun would that be?

7. Bake a cake
I remember having a ball helping my mom bake something when I was young. And not all the fun came at the end when I got to lick the icing from the bowl.

8. Build a "fort" outside
When my son was smaller he got the biggest kick out of playing in giant cardboard boxes. We would colour them, and cut "windows" out for him to look through.

9. Go bowling
Call the lanes ahead of time and ask if they have any summer specials (certain days may be cheaper).

10. Declare a "bored" game day
I learned to play chess, checkers, backgammon, and poker (my mom wasn't thrilled with that) one summer while staying with my grandparents. Few kids today don't realize you can play games without a computer.

11. Have a water balloon fight
You will totally win (but be sure to pick up the balloon remains, especially if you have very little ones or pets as they could be a choking

12. Pajama day
I feel like having these days as an adult! Stay in your pajamas all day long. Make pancakes in the morning, bake a pizza for lunch and lounge around.

A Mediterranean flare

Using ingredients such as feta cheese, olives, sun-dried tomatoes, oregano and basil give this grilled stuffed chicken breast a distinct zing

Preparation:

1. Preheat your barbecue to 260 C (500 F).
2. In a small bowl, combine the walnuts, feta, olives, sun-dried tomatoes, lemon zest, lemon juice, oregano and red pepper flakes. Set aside.
3. Butterfly chicken breasts by slicing in half (lengthwise) so the chicken remains attached. Gently pound chicken with a mallet to flatten. Place 4 to 5 basil leaves on flattened breast followed by ⅓ of the walnut and feta mixture and spread evenly.
4. Begin rolling chicken from one end to the other to form a pinwheel shape. Brush with olive oil and season lightly with salt and pepper. Secure roll with butcher string or 3 to 4 skewers to prevent roll from unravelling. Repeat with remaining chicken and filling.
5. Reduce heat to medium-high and grill for 25 mins. until internal temperature is 85 C (185 F).

Ingredients:

- 75 ml (1/3 cup) walnut pieces
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) feta cheese, crumbled
- 6 kalamata olives, pitted and chopped
- 4 sun-dried tomatoes (in oil), diced
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) lemon zest
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) lemon juice
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) oregano
- 2 ml (1/2 tsp) red pepper flakes
- 3 boneless chicken breasts
- Handful fresh basil leaves
- Salt and pepper, to taste
- Olive oil

THE PESTS OF COMPOSTING

I've recently started composting but ran into a bit of a nuisance – fruit flies. How do I get rid of them in my kitchen? Brad of Ottawa

QUEEN OF GREEN

LINDSAY COULTER
GREEN@METRONEWS.CA

▶ Composting, much like getting rid of fruit flies, is easier than you think.

Fruit flies are attracted to organic matter. The obvious culprits are fresh fruits and vegetables stored on countertops and rotting kitchen scraps or "greens" headed for the compost pile, as well as organic debris in garbage cans or kitchen drains.

I hope that besides the annoying fruit flies you've also noticed the upside of composting — a 40 per cent decrease in your weekly garbage.

Here are some simple troubleshooting tips to prevent a fruit fly population explosion.

Control fruit flies in the kitchen:

Use a glass or metal container for collecting kitchen waste. These won't hang onto odours (like plastics do) and a tight-fitting lid will keep fruit flies out.

Store your kitchen food scraps in a sealed container in the fridge or freezer.

Control fruit flies outdoors:

They're attracted to exposed food scraps, so each time you add greens, top them off with brown material like dry grass and leaves. Collect dry leaves and grass in a separate container to use year-round.

Put kitchen scraps in the centre of your compost pile, and then cover with browns.

Composting is easier than most people think, whether you have a backyard bin, municipal curbside pick-up or indoor worm bin. Check your city's website for more troubleshooting tips and advice, especially if you have curbside pick-up.

Can a promotion be imperfect?

In some cases, a 'big step up' might be a nice way of saying that your job is about to get a heck of a lot harder

DREW HINSHAW
METRO WORLD NEWS
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

Not every step up is a step in the right direction. Accept a bogus promotion and you could find yourself trapped in a job more miserable than the entry-level gig you rode in on.

"A lot of people are getting promoted in this economy because companies are trying to do more with less," executive coach Cynthia Shapiro says.

"Instead of bringing somebody in, they're having employees do three or four jobs by promoting them and then expecting them to still do their old work."

"It's kind of a recipe for disaster," she adds.

But it's not a recipe you need to swallow.

"You never have to take something that's being offered to you," executive coach Meredith Haberfeld says. And sometimes you shouldn't.

"You need to get clear about what you want out of your career long-term, then you need to make strategic moves towards that," she adds.

ISTOCK

▶ If the amount of work greatly outweighs the pay increase, you should think twice about jumping on board.

DON'T GET STUCK WITH A LOFTY TITLE

It's paradoxical: People who've gotten fired often say it's the best thing that ever happened to them. But a promotion? A wrong move up can feel more like a chute than a ladder.

"It's often easier to get a promotion than it is to move back if you don't like it," Shapiro warns.

"People don't let you. Companies like to see forward motion. You tell the company you want to go back down, they won't allow it.

"You try to go to another company and get the position you had before — but you've got this loftier title.

"They're going to imagine something is wrong," she adds.

Any new job title, Shapiro says, is going to be a leap. Think before you jump.

"I would recommend people take $50 to $100 and talk to an expert before you move," she says.

"These things sometimes aren't as good as they look," she adds. "Look at it objectively and make sure the position is set up for success."

Even if it is, it may not be for you, Haberfeld stresses.

"Make sure expanded leadership and accountability is something you are interested in," she says. "That said, don't be short-sighted."

Summer shouldn't mean a vacation from learning Try to turn every moment into an educational one

ISTOCK

Who knew such a fun summer activity like flying a kite could exercise the mind as well as the body?

For children, learning is an ongoing process, one that continues even after the last bell of the school year. Just because families are gearing up for fun, sun and relaxation it doesn't mean educational activities can't be incorporated into vacation plans.

It is just as important for children to participate in learning activities that exercise their growing minds as it is to be involved in physical activities that keep their bodies healthy and strong.

Kumon Math and Reading Centres recommend the following activities to incorporate learning while also engaging a child's brain.

Reading and Writing

- Encourage your child to read aloud to a family member each day.
- Write letters together and send them to grandparents or friends.
- Visit the library weekly; inquire about special events.

Math

- Build a kite with your child. Cut and measure shapes and take the kite out for a test flight.
- Teach your child to keep score. Review batting averages or other statistics from the sports pages.

Science

- Help your child plant flower or vegetable seeds and chart their growth.
- Take walks in the neighbourhood or a park and learn about native plants and animals.

History

- Share stories about the history of your family and work together to draw a family tree.
- Research the founders of your town and visit historical sites.

Art

- Tour an art museum or art exhibit.
- Encourage your child to draw a picture and give it to a neighbour or friend.

Music

- Provide children with household items and let them make their own instruments.
- Help your child write a song and perform it together. NEWS CANADA

Delay dampens Horton's big cup day

The Stanley Cup arrived a few hours later than expected in a small southwestern Ontario community yesterday.

Thousands of people braved the heat in downtown Dunnville to celebrate recent champion Nathan Horton's win and the cup's arrival with a parade.

But Horton told the crowd at around 1 p.m. the cup would be arriving late.

Many of the people who had gathered for the event had already left by the time it arrived closer to 2:30 p.m.

The cup was late because it was left behind in Boston.

Horton, a native of nearby Welland, Ont., was an NHL champion with the Boston Bruins this past year.

"I was a little disappointed about not seeing the cup because that was the main reason why I wanted to go, because I haven't seen it yet," said Caledonia resident Amber Eyre, who drove down to see the cup but left at around 1:30 p.m before it arrived.

She's also a fan of the Vancouver Canucks, the team Horton's Bruins beat in the finals. The loss gave her added incentive to go today's event.

"Being so close to almost getting the cup and then not, I just wanted to see it."

Clarke able hold onto one-shot lead over Johnson to win British Open

No matter how long it grows or even how quickly, the list of major champions from the tiny country of Northern Ireland just wouldn't feel complete without Darren Clarke.

He doesn't have the majestic swing of Rory McIlroy or the putting prowess of Graeme McDowell, the last two U.S. Open champions. He hasn't contended in a major for 10 years and was no longer among the top 100 in the world.

But none of that matters now, because he was extraordinary at Royal St. George's.

"Bad times in golf are more frequent than the good times," he said. "I've always been pretty hard on myself when I fail because I don't find it very easy to accept that. And there's times I've been completely and utterly fed up with the game."

Advice from friends, family and his agent was always the same.

"Get out there and practice and keep going, keep going, keep going," Clarke said. "And that's why I'm sitting here now."

Clarke held off brief challenges from Phil Mickelson and Dustin Johnson and held up under the pressure until no one could catch him.

Mickelson and Johnson shared second place, stretching the American drought to six straight majors without a win.

Despite meaningless bogeys on the last two holes, Clarke closed with an even-par 70.

"Pretty amazing right now," Clarke said. "It's been a dream since I've been a kid to win the Open, like any kid's dream is, and I'm able to do it, which just feels incredible."

Northern Ireland had gone 63 years without winning a major. Now it has three of the last six.

"Northern Ireland..... Golf capital of the world!!" McIlroy tweeted as Clarke played the last hole.

Japan claims first World Cup

Japan became the first Asian nation to win the Women's World Cup yesterday, beating the United States in a penalty shootout after both sides were level at 2-2 after extra time.

The Japanese denied the U.S. team the chance to become the first country to lift the cup three times.

The Americans missed their first three penalties, and Japan went on to win the shootout 3-1 when Saki Kumagai slotted the final shot high past goalkeeper Hope Solo.

The team displayed a banner reading "To our Friends Around the World — Thank You for Your Support" in reference to the March 11 earthquake and tsunami.

Japan captain Homare Sawa flicked a corner past Solo with three minutes of extra time left to equalize and set up the shootout.

"We ran and ran. We were exhausted but we kept running," said Sawa, the top scorer in the tournament with five goals.

Send a KISS

You can now post your kiss, and read even more kisses, online at metronews.ca/kiss.

U always had many friends..and still have them. pls dont cheat with them...pls never do something like this. this is a request to u as I exit. This heart used to pound loud just 4 u..but now it is bleeding....will need some time as u will also do. u made me look bad in front of the person..saying i was in love..didn't yr heart stop u ever? u could have left it at friendship and fixed me write then..i trusted u i honored u i valued u like no one else. People still say things abt u and i shut them up inspite of the harm u have done to me. FRIEND

Matt, I think you saw me looking at you, but I didn't get to smile at you. I wanted to talk to you today but you were busy. My day is complete every time I see you at work. I'll just see yah next week. R

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20
What seemed such a difficult decision to make last week will come easy to you this week.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21
Venus, planet of love and harmony, is very much on your side at the moment.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Treat others as you would like to be treated yourself.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 You don't have to make a big issue of everything.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 You will receive good news concerning your cash flow situation today.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 You seem to have been in a rather downbeat mood of late, but you will cheer up considerably over the next 24 hours.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Pay attention to what people you live and work with are trying to tell you.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 The message of the stars as the new week begins is that it's OK to dream.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 No task is too much for you and no situation is too difficult to handle.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 You will have to ask for assistance at some point today.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Everyone has limits, even an Aquarius, and your particular limits will be clear to see over the next 24 hours.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20. This promises to be a good week for friendships and partnerships. In fact you will find it remarkably easy to persuade just about anyone.
